Weather and Packing Tips

The NPS quotes the typical Sept max temp at 87 with the mins at 47. Of course that's at the valley floor - at higher elevations, where most of the good hikes take you, the temps will probably be at least 10 degrees cooler.

Now that might be the official story, but the last time I was in the Sierra Nevadas in September we had snow in the higher elevations. We were further north at the time and the locals said it was extraordinary to get snow that early, but it can happen. Plan on it being pretty cool in mornings with nice hiking temps during the day (except for Death Valley which will be frickin' hot) and you should be well prepared.

Sun screen will be a must, and I'll be packin' deet just in case.

Alabama Hills

"The Alabama Hills Arch can be found by driving 5.3 miles up the Whitney Portal Road. Turn right onto a short dirt road and go about 500 feet. Park near the fence, walk through an opening in the fence, and cross the wooden bridge over Lone Pine Creek. Walk north up the bank of the creek and then follow the sandy wash that parallels the ridge on your right (east). Walk north for about ten minutes then scan the ridge on the right for the arch. Look carefully, it blends into the rocks. When you spot the arch, it's another ten minute walk up the ridge to the base of the arch."

From Whitney Portal Rd go 3 miles, turn right on Movie Rd. Take the short hike to the Alabama Hills.
